REIMAGINE

Little Gestures with Big Meaning.

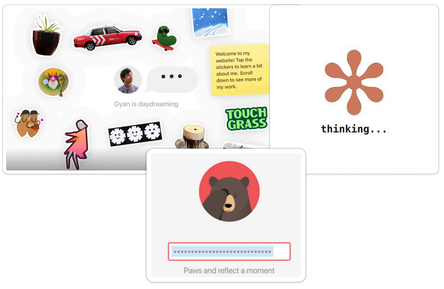

ARRIVAL | CHECK IN | THE WAIT | APPROACH COUNTER | BIOMETRICS | DOCUMENT CHECK | CONFIRM INFORMATION | PHOTO TAKING | MOBILE APP SET UP | CARD APPROVAL | LEAVE EPSC

This bucket of ideas is for micro interactions that, while small, bring a whole lot of personality and vibrance to transactionary experiences / surfaces.

These ideas help us ask: even though it's gov, why does it have to feel so boring, official, and sterile?

2 things we observed during desktop research:

Software Micro Interactions

Word changes as Claude thinks: Sperlunking, meandering, globbing, deciphering, musing, fathoming...

Micro delighters, random whimsical bread crumbs that humanise and make things fun

Replaces the dead (micro) wait times with something that feels more useful/human

Customise + Personality

Fun memorabilia to mark major milestones in their life, (sort of) encourage them/remind them that MOM is part of their journey

Relevant verbatims from our interviews:

QUESTION TO ASK:

What small moment (digital or physical) could make a person feel that MOM noticed this is not just a transaction to close?

Consider each moment:

- Taking the fingerprint
- Capturing the moment
- Setting up Singpass
- Completing the pass collection

Team reflection space: